

Unmasking a Century-Old Agenda: America's Manufactured Crisis

Every day, more Americans are waking up to the concept of a “Manufactured Crisis,” a term that refers to deliberately orchestrated socio-political and economic upheavals designed to destabilize and weaken a nation. To understand their significance, we must explore how these crises are crafted, their underlying motives, and what actions individuals can take to counter these effects.

James Simpson is an investigative journalist whose work highlights the presence of a strategic, ongoing effort to undermine American society, particularly through the manipulation of cultural and political institutions. His new book, Manufactured Crisis, explores the origins, mechanisms, and solutions to these manufactured crises, particularly focusing on cultural demoralization, economic destabilization, and political manipulation.

In this briefing we will discuss the following:

- » The Historical and Ideological Roots of the Manufactured Crisis
- » The Four Stages of Subversion
- » Strategies for Resistance and Restoration

YOUR MISSION: Learn about the systematic subversion of American values and institutions, and actively participate in restoring cultural, economic, and political integrity.

 ATTENTION: America faces multiple crises, some of which are deliberately orchestrated by internal and external forces aiming to subvert its foundational structures.

WHY YOU SHOULD CARE

- » The Manufactured Crisis has deep historical roots, which makes understanding it crucial to recognizing patterns in today's political climate.

- » Knowing the stages of subversion enables you to identify and counteract these efforts in your community.
- » The Cloward-Piven strategy, originally focused on overwhelming welfare systems, has evolved into broader attacks on societal stability.
- » Strategic knowledge empowers you to engage effectively in political processes, ensuring your voice contributes to national resilience.
- » The movement to reverse the subversion of our nation requires American patriots to band together and fight for liberty.

Ep. 8-317 (OSINT) Open-Sourced Intelligence Report. This briefing includes a conversation between Kevin Freeman and James Simpson. James is a friend of the Economic War Room® and a patriot.

James Simpson is an investigative journalist, businessman and former economist and budget examiner for the White House Office of Management and Budget (OMB).

Mr. Simpson is best known for his exposé on the Cloward-Piven Strategy of Manufactured Crisis. His work provided background for Glenn Beck's TV series on the subject. He is featured in Curtis Bowers' award-winning documentary "AGENDA: Grinding America Down," Trevor Loudon's "The Enemies Within," and "Enemies Within the Church," and is a frequent guest on radio and TV talk shows.

1. The Historical and Ideological Roots of the Manufactured Crisis

Today's crises are not spontaneous but have been long in the making. According to Simpson, they are part of a global communist plot that dates back over a century. From the Russian Revolution in 1917 to the expansion of communist influence worldwide, various radical left-wing factions have sought to undermine America from within.

Many believe the fall of the Soviet Union to have been the end of the communist threat, however, they are sorely mistaken.

"None of the other communist countries ever went away... What happened in 1991, when the Soviet Union supposedly fell, and communism became a discredited thing of the past? It was actually an active measure... it was not a real fall." –James Simpson

The fall of the Soviet Union was a calculated ruse. Rather than being dismantled, these ideologies simply shifted into new forms, embedding themselves into globalist institutions and domestic American politics.

The continuation of the Communist threat is evidenced by Richard Cloward and Frances Fox Piven who developed the Cloward-Piven strategy in the 1960s.

Their aim was to overwhelm the American welfare system by encouraging as many people as possible to claim benefits, eventually forcing a political revolution.

Today, the Cloward-Piven strategy has evolved to attack not just welfare but also voting systems, immigration, and financial institutions. This is seen clearly in the policies of the Democrat party.

For instance, today’s open border policies, combined with expansive welfare programs, put unsustainable pressure on government resources, potentially leading to economic collapse.

⚠ Attention: The crises we face today are the continuation of a century-old ideological battle aimed at dismantling the fabric of American society.

2. The Four Stages of Subversion

The four stages of subversion, as explained by the Soviet defector Yuri Bezmenov, are demoralization, destabilization, crisis, and normalization.

Each stage plays a vital role in weakening national resolve. Demoralization undermines national pride and cultural values, while destabilization hits institutions like the economy and the military. The crisis stage triggers public panic, and finally, normalization cements radical changes as the new societal structure.

Demoralization: The undermining of a nation's confidence in itself through cultural and ideological attacks. This phase is about influencing the society's perception of itself and its values, often by promoting divisive ideologies and critiquing societal norms.

- » Involves a long-term process aimed at reshaping society's values and perceptions.
- » Targets cultural institutions, education, and media to instill doubt and cynicism about national identity and values.
- » Creates a generational divide, where citizens become disillusioned with their own society and heritage.

“We have been under attack, culturally, since the 1930s.” –James Simpson

Destabilization: the erosion of morale by targeting the nation's essential structures such as economy, foreign relations, and defense systems.

- » Focuses on weakening the economy, foreign relations, and defense systems of a nation.
- » Exploits social issues such as inequality, racial tensions, and economic disparities to create unrest.
- » Encourages political and social polarization, fostering division and a lack of confidence in governance.

Crisis: An all-consuming, orchestrated predicament, designed to lead the nation to a tipping point. The overwhelming nature of these crises leads to panic and a desperate longing for resolution, setting the stage for drastic change or intervention.

- » Aims to precipitate a major crisis that paralyzes the nation, rendering it unable to function normally.
- » Utilizes social chaos, economic breakdowns, or military conflicts to accelerate instability.
- » Sets the stage for radical changes by eroding trust in existing institutions and compelling citizens to seek new solutions.

“The crisis strategy: create a crisis in which you can then, present a solution.” –Kevin Freeman

Normalization: The establishment of a new status quo post-crisis. This could be the acceptance of new political ideologies, governance models, or social norms that align with the objectives of those perpetuating the subversion.

- » Represents the imposition of a new order following the crisis, often under authoritarian or foreign influence.
- » Involves the acceptance of new norms and the establishment of control by the subverting power.
- » Aims to stabilize the country under the new regime or ideology, solidifying changes made during the crisis.

Attention: The KGB and other communist actors began the work of subversion in the early 1900s, and that work is being continued today by current communist powers.

3. Strategies for Resistance and Restoration

To overcome these attacks on liberty, the American people must band together and wield the weapons granted to them by the Constitution.

We must vote for freedom and overturn the work of this anti-American ideology that threatens to envelop our society before it is too late.

“This November 5th, we have to vote for Donald J. Trump as president. We absolutely have to if we are going to retake the levers of power to initiate positive change, we absolutely have to have good leadership at the top. And that would be our only choice, Donald Trump.” –James Simpson

Electing a strong leader who understands the value of the American experiment and is willing to put everything on the line to preserve American freedom for future generations gives us hope, but it is not enough.

The American people must rise up. Grassroots activism in the local community will be required to reform our culture.

Now is not a time to vote, sit back, and let elected leaders fix every problem. Now is a time for personal conviction and community action.

Every American has a choice, in each moment, to act in a manner that represents their values, or to watch from the sidelines as a cultural war wages over the future of our nation.

“We also have to do much beyond our own vote. Encourage others to vote... work in voter rolls, make sure we have clean elections, do education, promote free speech, those sorts of things as well.” –Kevin Freeman

It is through unity and perseverance, that we, the American people, can overcome these attacks on our liberty and restore our nation to its rightful place as a beacon of hope for all people seeking freedom.

Attention: Voting and community involvement are pivotal in turning the tide against manufactured crises.
