

Economic Justice – The Golden Rule

The wealth gap has been a topic of deliberation and contention in American politics and culture for quite a while. However, this was not always the case. For most of American history, and especially after World War Two, the average American was seeing a regular improvement in their standard of living. The middle class was growing, sometimes at unprecedented rates. More and more Americans were able to enjoy the prosperity of the nation. However, all that changed rather abruptly in the early 1970s. Now, the middle class is in decline and wealthy elites are gaining more and more power.

In this briefing we will discuss the following:

- » Decoupling the Dollar – How America left the gold standard
- » The Rise of Wealth Inequality
- » The Financialization of America – how America left capitalism behind
- » The Founders' Perspective & The Rise of Financial Tyrants
- » Gold & Justice – How gold (and silver) can reverse inequality
- » Pirate Money – The Founders' Solution

YOUR MISSION: Understand how America's wealth inequality was formed and what can be done to restore economic justice to the people.

ATTENTION: There is a devious plot to use economic warfare to control the American people, but the founders provided us with a solution: Pirate Money.

Ep. 7-253 (OSINT) ) Open-Sourced Intelligence Report. This briefing is part of an exclusive teaching series by Kevin Freeman. It also addresses one of the strategic priorities we have been working on with Transactional Gold & Silver.

1. Decoupling the Dollar

For most of American history currency was either in denominations of gold and silver or, in the case of paper money, it was redeemable for its value in gold or silver. In Episode 252, Kevin goes in-depth on the history of American money and how we ended up with the dollars we have today.

The most recent shift that led to the massive inflation and wealth gap we see today began in 1971 when Nixon completed the decoupling of the dollar from gold.

“President Nixon feared a run on the bank. And as an emergency response to that, he chose to ‘temporarily’ close the gold window. He said it was temporary, but that move completely decoupled our paper dollar from any backing other than the full faith and credit of the United States government. About that time, Nixon arranged a deal with the Saudis that oil would only be traded in American dollars, and that forced other nations to hold our paper. One (perhaps unintended) consequence, however, became the financialization of our entire economy.” –Kevin Freeman

This led to the creation of the petrodollar arrangement where oil could only be purchased or sold in U.S. Dollars. Unlike gold, the price of oil fluctuates with supply and demand constantly as it is a commodity that is regularly consumed. Gold tends to hold its value over time.

This fluctuating value means that the U.S. Dollar was not really backed by oil, but simply linked to it. If you had to buy oil, you had to use dollars.

2. The Rise of Wealth Inequality

Since the changes of the 1970s, America has seen an incredible shift in wealth inequality. Not just in the net worth of individuals, but also in their standard of living.

“As a kid, I remember that you wanted anything that you bought to be made in America. But after 1971, that changed. Foreign cars became preferred. Foreign electronics, foreign furniture. We didn’t have to manufacture in America. America was all about financialization. The power shifted from Detroit and Main Street to Wall Street, and that’s where the real money was made. The rich got richer through stocks, bonds, and financial derivatives. The middle class lost ground and the poor got trapped in a welfare system. And inflation emerged in a huge way. What cost $1 in 1971 costs maybe $8 today. Even in the past 20 years, just since 2003, prices have gone up something like 75%, and they’re up 20% just since the year 2020.” –Kevin Freeman

If the cost of goods goes up, so does the cost of a standard of living. This means many Americans have seen their relative standard of living decrease instead of increase since the 1970s. The purchasing power of a dollar has drastically declined by over 87%. Younger generations like Millennials and GenZ have grown up in an America witnessing decline. Most of them will have a harder time building wealth and establishing themselves than their parents had.

So, where did the wealth go? The Global Times claims that “Since the 1970s, income inequality and wealth disparity in the United States have continually deepened.” In the last few decades, it has been clear, “The rich keep getting richer, the poor keep getting poorer, and the middle class is squeezed.”

The article continues by stating that the middle class is shrinking. A “middle-class America” was formed in some 20 years from the end of World War II to the early 1970s. Afterward, however, despite the continued growth of the U.S. economy, the middle class has not expanded, but shrunk significantly. The share of American adults who live in middle-income households fell from 61 percent in 1971 to 51 percent in 2019.”

The Global Times clearly sees the outcome and has a great analysis of the problem, but they fail to properly address the root causes. They blame capitalism, partisanship, and racial inequality. While the impact of these could be debated, the argument is weak when compared to the failure of major economic policy changes in the 1970s.

- » Capitalism was responsible for America’s economic rise to greatness and the growth of the middle class in the 1950s-1970s, it cannot be responsible for the betterment of life for all people and the intentional destruction of them at the same time.
- » Racial inequality was greater in the 1940s, before the civil rights movement, than it is now. Blaming racial inequality may have some unwanted consequences.
- » Partisanship is also a foolish claim as America has been massively partisan since her founding. Yet life kept getting better for the average American.

The question then must be, at what point did the wealth gap begin to form and the middle class begin to shrink? And what changed just before then? Suddenly it becomes clear, the most important root issue is not so complicated as partisanship, capitalism, or racial inequality... it is actually quite simple. Paper money, which created the financialization of everything.

⚠ Attention: America’s wealth gap has gone out of control and the middle class is shrinking. The cause? PAPER MONEY.

3. The Financialization of America

The transition from gold-backed to paper money clearly happened just before the beginning of the decline and is an obvious primary suspect, but how could something so simple have such a devastating effect?

The transition to paper money opened the door to what is called financialization. This is where the economy shifts from manufacturing to financial trade.

“Investopedia... says the beginnings of financialization in the United States can be traced back to the 1950s. However, the financial sector didn’t expand until much later in the 20th century, after the collapse of the Bretton Woods system... which tied international currencies to the U.S. dollar and anchored the dollar to gold, creating predictable exchange rates and limited speculation. Thus, when this fell, a new period marked by free trade and the free movement of capital began. This also created instability in the global markets from which the financial industry has profited.”

–Kevin Freeman

While the profit of the financial markets can be great for the American people, they are way better for the wealthiest individuals who are able to invest more money into them. There is nothing inherently wrong with that, but when the whole economy shifts to financialism, it leaves the lower and middle-class families behind, especially when the dollar loses its purchasing power and the industries that prospered the middle class moved their facilities overseas for cheaper labor.

Industry Week writes that “financialization is only about making money from money; it has nothing to do with creating jobs or shared prosperity and, as a result, it has had a devastating effect on manufacturing.”

Instead of building new factories or inventing new products, the wealthy elite are building wealth by throwing their money into a financial casino, with guarantees. Wall Street now uses “quick-buck” methods such as derivatives to make money from money and have all of their gambling protected by American taxpayers. Allowing finance to gamble with depositor's money was a terrible decision that led to the crash of 2008 and will lead to another crash in the future unless they can be stopped."

The article continues to state that "it is no coincidence that the rise of financialization happened during the decline of manufacturing, middle-class income, capital investment, investment in infrastructure, and the rise of inequality. It is also no coincidence that during the same period, there was an enormous shift in wealth to the top 20% earners at the expense of the bottom 80%."

"Financialization is about risky trading and the return on net assets that benefit shareholders, but not the economy... Financialization is not a good long-term strategy for manufacturing or the economy." –Kevin Freeman

Capitalism is all about providing capital for investment into new businesses and products. Profit is still the goal, but the methodology is one that betters life for all people involved. Prices are determined by a free market, giving consumers more power over the economy.

Lawrence E. Mitchell writes "The United States no longer is a capitalist country. It has created a new economic system that appears to be capitalist but no longer performs the functions of capitalism... While capitalism still characterizes a portion of the U.S. economy, it has become subordinated to a new economic order. This economic system is one in which the financial markets exist primarily to serve themselves. In this system, capital is raised for the purpose of creating, selling, and trading securities and derivative securities that do not finance industry but rather trade within markets that exist as an economy unto themselves. At the same time, those markets have profound and adverse effects on the real economy. This new economic system is Financialism."

Financialism ignores consumers and is focused solely on personal gain. This is an un-American wealth-building strategy that the Founders would have despised.

Attention: Financialism, made possible by the decoupling of the U.S. Dollar from gold is responsible for the wealth gap and economic injustice around the world.

4. The Founders' Perspective & The Rise of Financial Tyrants

America was founded by men and women who swore away their lives and their wealth for the sake of the people. They took major risks and many made the ultimate sacrifice so that other Americans could be free.

This selfless worldview formed the Founders and most Americans for generations. The American spirit has always been one whose primary goal was for the freedom of the people, not just oneself.

For this reason, the Founders were very intentional when framing the Constitution to ensure that it protected the people, and their freedom, from all possible threats. One of these threats was near to their hearts because it had played a crucial role in the failure of the Articles of Confederation.

“To say that the Founders of this nation hated unbacked paper money is an understatement because they loathed it and, more importantly, they feared it. They knew it would bring destruction, from the addiction to the printing press and the inevitable greed of humanity. And it has led to the financialization of our economy. But here’s the problem... People have no concept of what money is or should be. So we put up with dirty green pieces of paper with pictures of dead presidents that say Federal Reserve at the top... No... real money is defined by those who founded this nation. And you can go further back to the Bible days. It’s always been silver and gold. People forget that. And that is what’s led to the massive wealth gap that we have now.”

–Kevin Freeman

Kevin goes more in-depth on the Founders’ perspective on money in Episode 252.

The Founders learned their lesson and implemented gold and silver as the only currencies states could produce. They left room for paper money in specific emergencies, but the nation avoided using paper money for almost a century. Paper money was almost always backed by gold or silver and could be exchanged for its equivalent value.

- » One reason the Founders' feared paper money was because of the power it would give to the elites who controlled the printer.
- » This fear has been realized today as financial institutions like BlackRock have become powerful enough to influence the direction of culture, policy, and the economy without the permission of Congress or a vote from the American people.
- » These institutions wield money as a weapon to see the visions of their leaders become a reality.
- » With the power of financialization, these companies are only interested in their own gain and the reach of their control.
- » They do not hold a selfless perspective or want the people to be free, instead, they wish to impose their will on the people “BlackRock is an investment manager, but now BlackRock has been dictating to companies who should lead them, whom they can hire, and what they must do in terms of ESG and DEI, causing Bud Light, Disney, and Target to offend their core customers and lose money. All of this is the direct result of financialization...

They're doing it to make themselves rich. But they put all of the rest of us at risk.”

–Kevin Freeman

This threat is one the American people cannot allow. It is harmful to middle and lower-income families and puts freedom at risk.

Attention: Our Founders hated paper money and saw the dangers of it, they wanted gold and silver currency because, without it, tyranny gains power.

5. Gold and Justice

The Founders understood that gold, and silver, were the best way to establish a currency. But there are some setbacks.

- » According to The Wall Street Journal, gold is not wallet-friendly.
- » Gold is also virtually useless for buying gas, groceries, or even a movie ticket.

Because of these weaknesses, gold is ineffective as a physical currency in the modern world. This is why paper money, backed by gold, was implemented. This allows for wallet-friendly currency that is exchangeable for gold, meaning the currency's value is more stable.

One of the other problems we face today is that gold is not easily accessible

“We want gold to protect and preserve our wealth, but it’s useless for buying gas, groceries, or a movie ticket. So who can afford to buy gold? Do you think the middle class can afford to buy gold knowing that it might take eight weeks to get your money out of it? What if a dishwasher were to break and you put your savings and now I need to get the money out? You can’t wait eight weeks...That’s the challenge that we’re facing. How do we bring economic justice in an overly financialized economy, and at the same time give the average American the opportunity to preserve their wealth?”

–Kevin Freeman

If the average American cannot easily acquire or sell gold, then it has limited value. It can be used for a small portion of savings, but not as an emergency fund.

Gold is also very expensive and many Americans cannot afford to buy it in common denominations. Currently, an ounce of gold is valued at around $2,000. Many Americans who live closer to paycheck-to-paycheck, do not have $2,000 sitting around. They may have a few hundred dollars stashed away for emergencies.

Those emergency funds are losing their purchasing power daily as inflation continues to weaken the buying power of the dollar. Meanwhile, gold maintains its value over long periods and could provide a safer emergency fund strategy. Since gold is not accessible or affordable for many Americans, they are being robbed by inflation with no hedge for protection.

⚠ Attention: Real money is justice, but it is currently inaccessible for many Americans. This must change.

6. Pirate Money – The Founders’ Solution

Thankfully, our nation’s Founders left a hidden treasure in the Constitution that provides the States the power to declare gold and silver as legal tender. This means that gold and silver currency can return to the U.S.

Kevin has worked with multiple patriots to form a plan for the implementation of this gold and silver currency but in a unique and powerful way.

To Kevin, it is not enough to have gold and silver currency if the average American cannot use it or if it is impractical. So they looked for a way to use modern electronic technology to transact in gold and silver.

“We can do this. This is a legitimate alternative monetary system that can be set up in any state. And I chose Texas for several reasons. One, I live here. Number two, they already have a bullion depository that I encouraged them to build several years ago. And number three, we know some members of the legislature. So we tried this in the 88th Texas Legislature. We developed a plan and we got very far with it, but it didn’t pass. We’re not giving up. I’ve written the book Pirate Money as a Treasure Map to implement state-based gold and silver money. Pieces of eight and gold doubloons made modern with electronic payment capabilities. My new book (Pirate Money) explains it all.” –Kevin Freeman
