

Economic War Room - The Importance of Speed to accomplish our goals!

Many have watched the leftist agenda to take down America over the last 50 years. It has been a slow methodical plan to indoctrinate our schools, takeover our political system, and destroy western civilization. At times, it feels like America has been asleep for too long. There is an urgent task to win the war and save western civilization. To win this war, we need to move fast!

Your brief includes insights from former Top Gun pilot, Ed Rush. He highlights how to quickly impact change based on the principle of rapid small incremental adjustments. Ed provides a quick national security perspective and explains a methodology that can help equip economic patriots to move now!

The Objective: To provide a speed perspective in accomplishing goals in your life. Also, to develop a framework as economic patriots with strategic sprints that can positively impact America.

Your Mission: Read the intelligence report and gain understanding with a topline overview of national security and global economic issue. The goal is to start to develop a speed mindset as it relates to critical topics addressed in the Economic War Room.

"Shorts sprints and burst create great change in your life or business." – Ed Rush

(OSINT) - Open Sourced Intelligence Briefing

National Security Overview and Interview with Kevin Freeman and Ed Rush. Ed fought in Iraq and was part of operation plan for potential war against North Korea.

Cyber-economic activity is definitely a threat we need to be aware of daily. Our OSINT report provides a military perspective as well, covering two major war fronts:

- 1. Asia/ North Korea
- 2. The Middle East

1. Major Rush has studied North Korea in detail and helped develop war plans in case they were ever needed. A North Korean conflict would be a north/south front war. It would become a battle on a line and would be about hitting a target. It would be a target-centric war.

In this case, North Korea would head South, and we would go North. Whoever moves the boundary the most wins.

A North Korea War would be an incredibly short war if we were just fighting them. The war would be over in less than a week if we engaged.

If China entered that battle, then we would have a real war.

2. The Middle East is a completely different war. There are 11- 15 players in Syria, and that seems to change daily. You are not sure who is in charge or what will happen next. You are not even sure who the bad guys are. And, you never have clear rules of engagement.

Other Geo-Political Hot Spots

Venezuela and Iran are both at risk as totalitarian communist socialist governments in deep trouble. Short term things have really heated up in Venezuela.

Iran is also dealing with its own internal conflict. Some believe Iran will turn and become an ally and expect a regime change within the next 10 years.

Iran is a strategic place for both the US and Israel. They are not an Arab country, they are Persians and the citizens of Iran tend to think more like we do in alignments.

Iran used to be an ally of the U.S. They still fly our F-14's, which cannot compete with our military, but reminds us of the relationship we used to have with them.

Iran is at the strategic center of the Middle East. Unfortunately, we are not aligned now for good and bad reasons.

Things are constantly evolving in the Middle East. Egypt has become friendlier to Israel, even though not too long ago there was a war between them.

Iran goes back 1000's of years with King Cyrus, who became a blessing to Israel. Many Iranians recognize that heritage, despite current government leadership. Many believe the heritage and history are still recognized by the Iranian people.

China, as outlined in Kevin Freeman's Pentagon report, has been in an economic war with the U.S. for years.

Businesses and our Government under the Trump administration are finally recognizing the China threat.

From a military perspective, China has 4,000 fighter airplanes, 1,500 MiG 21 airplanes. If we ended up in a military war it would be a significant war.

Many believe China's focus is on winning economically.

With 2025 initiatives, China is focused on the economic and cyber front.

“The goals of Made in China 2025 include increasing the Chinese-domestic content of core materials to 40 percent by 2020 and 70 percent by 2025. The plan focuses on high-tech fields including the pharmaceutical industry, automotive industry, aerospace industry, semiconductors, IT and robotics, etc., which are presently the purview of foreign companies.” –Wikipedia

One belt-one road, cyber, and IP theft are key pieces of the economic war they are driving.

China and Russia have no interest in keeping the American petrodollar. They have been working to establish other trading currencies like the petro-yuan.

Current National Security Initiatives and Global Strategic Alliances:

Some think Trump is trying to drive a wedge between China and North Korea. Perhaps he should be driving a wedge between Russia and China.

North Korea, China and Russia have similar alignments. Russia has reach to each of these other nations by supplying weapons and Russian airplanes.

The thinking is:

- North Korea has more to fear from China, than it does the U.S.
- Russian has more to fear from China than the U.S.

If we could break them up it makes it more difficult for them to fight the U.S. economically. This would strengthen the petrodollar as well as our ability to fight a kinetic war if needed.

Interestingly, as you look at alliances there is a disconnect with Iran. Despite our disagreements with Iran's current regime, we are aligned with many of the same allies on the ground.

Ed Rush – Economic Speed Round: If you were king for a day, what would you do.

"I would go on a deregulation spree – 24 hours, take every possible law on the books that makes it harder for businesses to do business, teachers to teach school, parents to raise their children, and abolish the IRS. It would be a busy day."

"All we tried to do was get Government the hell out of the way so you people could make it good." –Ronald Reagan

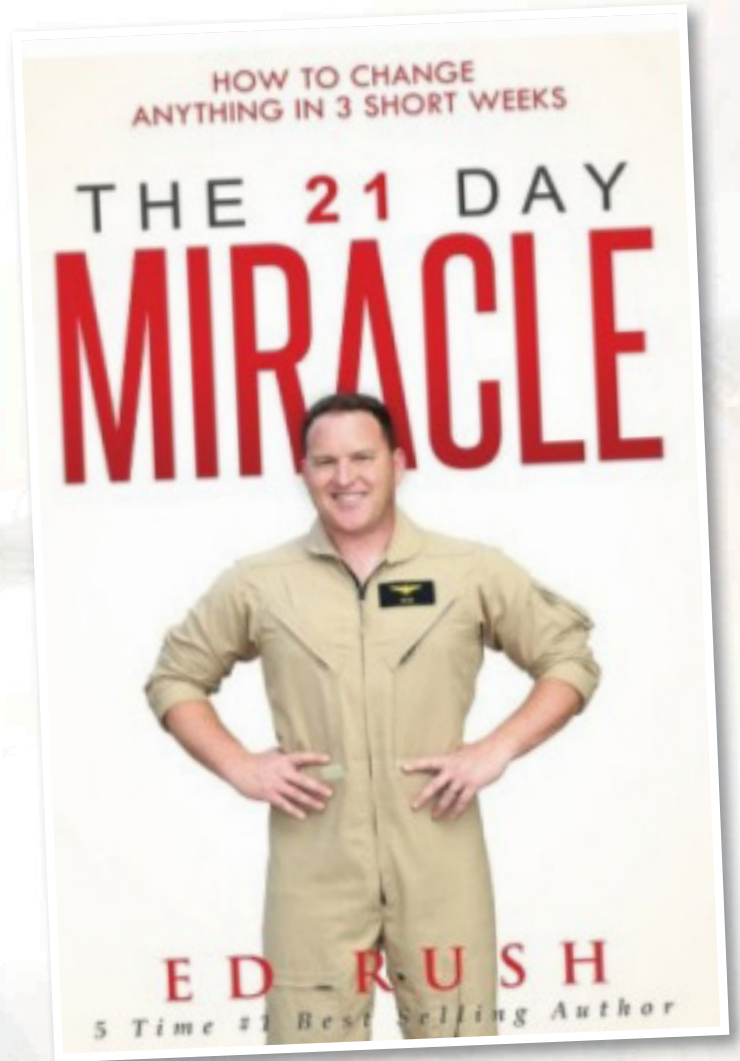

"Government does not solve the problem, government is the problem." –Ronald Reagan

Good News: Economic Patriots like You Can Make A Difference!

Why You Should Care:

1. We all want to do great things in an amazing short time if we can.
2. Having a topline understanding of geo-political hotspots and what is happening around the world is beneficial to understanding what the politicians may or may not really be saying.
3. U.S. National Security is critical to America's economic freedom. A straight economic war with China or other major conflict impacts your money, livelihood, and way of life.
4. Geopolitical events around the world can potentially put the U.S. at risk. You need to be prepared for multiple geo-political impacts and the force-multiplier of economic activity.
