

A Timely Reprieve from Government CTA Overreach

During the Covid-19 crisis, the US government, like many governments of the world, placed major restrictions on citizens and businesses. In the US, many large corporations were protected while small businesses were forced to close. These regulations ruined the economy and devastated many American families who relied on their businesses for income.

Today the remaining small businesses face a new threat, The Corporate Transparency Act (CTA). The CTA has emerged as a regulatory flashpoint, enacted as part of the National Defense Authorization Act (NDAA). This law introduced stringent reporting requirements targeting beneficial ownership, with penalties for non-compliance. While proponents argue that it combats financial crimes, the CTA has sparked widespread concern about its fairness, the burden on small businesses, and the potential for misuse.

In this briefing we will discuss the following:

- » Corporate Transparency Act's Impact on Small Business
- » Congressional Oversight and Legislation Process: Overreach and Weaponization
- » Legal and Constitutional Challenges
- » The Timely Federal Court Injunction That Provides Breathing Space

YOUR MISSION: Understand the complexities of the CTA and its implications to ensure compliance and protect your business interests while advocating for fair and effective legislative practices.

WHY YOU SHOULD CARE

- » This affects nearly every small business owner, potentially leading to criminal felony charges if not adhered to, with implications for personal and business data privacy.

- » Legislative processes can result in laws that might not be in the best interest of citizens or businesses yet can significantly alter lives through their enforcement.
- » This lack of transparency and due diligence in legislative processes underscores a governance issue that affects every citizen.
- » Legal challenges to the CTA present an opportunity to revisit its constitutionality and prevent potential misuse of sensitive data.
- » Such challenges could redefine the boundaries of government overreach and protect constitutional rights, directly impacting how businesses operate under similar future regulations.
- » The war on small business is a war on the American people, wanting to hand economic control to the globalist owners of large corporations.

Ep. 9-324 (OSINT) Open-Sourced Intelligence Report. This briefing includes a conversation between Kevin Freeman and Jacki Deason. Jacki is a friend of the Economic War Room® and an American Patriot.

Jacki hosts The Jacki Daily Show, a weekly show and podcast airing on BlazeMedia, on The Dial in Texas, and podcast on iHeartRadio, iTunes, Spotify, and Stitcher.

Previously, Jacki worked for an engineering firm specializing in energy production, national security, and environmental cleanup. She served as legal counsel on Capitol Hill to the Chairman of the Subcommittee on the Constitution and the former Ranking Member of the Commercial and Administrative Law Subcommittee, advising on the oversight of federal agencies. Prior to her career in Washington, she worked as a corporate litigator, and as an Assistant Vice President for a national bank.

1. Corporate Transparency Act's Impact on Small Business

The Corporate Transparency Act (CTA) requires small businesses to disclose beneficial ownership information to FinCEN, ostensibly to prevent money laundering and other financial crimes. However, the implications for small business owners are profound:

“If you don’t file with this entity inside the US Treasury Department... You can be deemed a felon if the government chooses to enforce the law, whether you know about it or not. Ignorance of the law is no excuse. You can be fined up to $591 and some odd dollars a day, for noncompliance, or sentenced up to two years in prison for simply not handing over this basic information.” –Jacki Deason

Non-compliance could result in fines of $500 per day, felony charges, and imprisonment. Critics highlight the inequity in excluding large corporations from these requirements, leaving smaller entities disproportionately affected.

This law targets small businesses, defined as entities with fewer than 20 employees or less than $5 million in annual revenue, excluding larger corporations.

The requirement to report personal details like Social Security numbers poses a risk of identity theft and privacy violation, especially since this information could be shared internationally with over 170 other nations.

Attention: The CTA could criminalize millions of small business owners for non-compliance due to a lack of awareness or understanding. Thankfully, a district court in Texas placed an injunction that (temporarily) prevents enforcement of the law.

1. Congressional Oversight and Legislation Process: Overreach and Weaponization

The CTA’s passage through the NDAA highlights systemic flaws in legislative practices.

Congress often passes laws without a thorough review. It is a commonly accepted reality that there are too many bills, and they are all far too long for members of Congress to have performed a detailed analysis of each. Yet they vote on them every year, passing many into law.

“They don’t know what’s in the bills... Congress has no idea what it’s passing about half of the time... They cannot read all the bills or amendments.” –Jacki Deason

The lack of detailed understanding by legislators can result in laws, like the CTA, being passed that serve political or bureaucratic interests over the public good. Sometimes they are malicious and invasive.

This process can lead to the weaponization of legislation against certain groups or political adversaries, as highlighted by historical examples of IRS targeting during the Obama administration (Operation Choke Point).

⚠ Attention: Legislation can evolve into tools for political gain, impacting American citizens based on their affiliations or political/religious expressions instead of real criminal activity.

2. Legal and Constitutional Challenges

Thankfully, the CTA already faces legal scrutiny for potentially violating constitutional rights:

Challenges against the CTA argue it infringes on privacy and property rights.

“They don’t know where it’s going to land. It does look unconstitutional on the face, but you can’t rely on that.” –Kevin Freeman

Although initial legal victories were limited to specific plaintiffs, broader constitutional rulings could offer relief to all small businesses, questioning the government’s right to such intrusive data collection. And there is a court injunction preventing enforcement. At least for the time being.

The deadline for submitting such data to the government was early January and a final ruling that would throw out the law could take much longer. Thus, it is essential to be aware of and on top of this law and its challenges.

Even if Donald Trump were to get rid of the CTA, there would have been three weeks under Biden where the law was in effect and business owners who did not submit their information would face felony charges. Fortunately, the last-minute injunction provides a reprieve.

3. The Timely Federal Court Injunction That Provides Breathing Space

On December 3rd, a Texas court produced the following ruling:

Having determined that Plaintiffs have carried their burden, the Court GRANTS Plaintiff's Motion for a Preliminary Injunction. Therefore, the CTA, 31 U.S.C. § 5336 is hereby enjoined. Enforcement of the Reporting Rule, 31 C.F.R. 1010.380 is also hereby enjoined, and the compliance deadline is stayed under § 705 of the APA. Neither may be enforced, and reporting companies need not comply with the CTA's January 1, 2025, BOI reporting deadline pending further order of the Court.

<https://s-corp.org/2024/12/cta-struck-down-by-texas-court/>

Attention: Legal challenges to the CTA highlight its potential flaws, but if the injunction were withdrawn or defeated on appeal, compliance would remain critical until definitive rulings are made.

Note: An appeal has been filed, and the Appeals Court could reinstate the ruling as soon as December 27. Watch the news carefully, as compliance by January 1 could theoretically be reinstated. We believe that would be extremely unfair, giving small businesses just a few days to file.
