

The Economics of Health Care

The COVID-19 pandemic exposed deep flaws in the healthcare system, from eroded medical freedom to institutional corruption and skyrocketing costs. These challenges have created an urgent need for individuals to reclaim control over their health and well-being. Dr. Simone Gold, a seasoned physician and attorney, has highlighted these systemic issues while advocating for a return to patient-centered care, critical thinking, and affordable healthcare solutions. This Economic Battle Plan™ outlines key lessons from the pandemic, emphasizing the importance of medical autonomy, skepticism toward captured institutions, and practical steps to improve health through lifestyle changes and innovative healthcare models.

In this briefing we will discuss the following:

- » Medical Freedom and the Lessons of the COVID-19 Pandemic
- » Institutional Corruption and the Importance of Critical Thinking
- » Taking Back Control: Affordable Healthcare and Lifestyle Choices

YOUR MISSION: Learn how to protect your medical freedom, think critically about institutional narratives, and adopt affordable healthcare solutions to enhance your health and financial independence.

WHY YOU SHOULD CARE

- » Medical freedom is foundational to personal liberty. Understanding how it was eroded during the pandemic empowers you to safeguard your right to make informed health decisions for yourself and your family.
- » Institutional corruption directly impacts the information and care you receive, making critical thinking essential to avoid being misled by biased authorities.
- » Affordable healthcare options and lifestyle changes can save you thousands of dollars annually while improving your health, offering a path to greater autonomy and well-being.

Ep. 10-361 (OSINT) Open-Sourced Intelligence Report. This briefing includes a conversation between Kevin Freeman and Dr. Simone Gold. Dr. Gold is a friend of the Economic War Room® and an American Patriot.

Simone Gold, MD, JD—an emergency physician and Stanford-educated attorney—is the founder of America's Frontline Doctors and hosts The Gold Opinion. She is a board-certified emergency physician who completed medical school at Chicago Medical School and earned her Juris Doctor degree from Stanford University Law School, followed by residency in emergency medicine at Stony Brook University Hospital. Her career includes serving in roles within the U.S. Surgeon General's office and the Senate Labor & Human Resources Committee—even beyond pandemic periods, she continues clinical work across diverse communities.

1. Medical Freedom and the Lessons of the COVID-19 Pandemic

The COVID-19 pandemic exposed how fragile medical freedom truly is and how quickly it can be stripped away when fear takes hold.

Medical freedom—the right to make decisions about your body and healthcare—is not just a personal matter. It is a foundational pillar of liberty, standing alongside religious and economic freedom.

During the pandemic, many patients were denied access to early treatments and instead coerced into harmful or unnecessary protocols such as the overuse of ventilators or drugs like Remdesivir, which has been linked to adverse outcomes.

Others were pressured into vaccinations under threat of losing their jobs, their ability to travel, or even their participation in public life.

Fear became the driving force behind compliance, and people surrendered their rights in exchange for a false sense of safety.

“Your medical freedom is as important as your religious freedom or economic freedom. If you don’t have the ability to make decisions about your body or your children’s health, you don’t have freedom at all.” –Dr. Simone Gold

This crisis revealed a sobering truth: fear can be weaponized to justify government and corporate overreach. When fear takes root, even well-meaning citizens can be manipulated into surrendering their rights.

History shows that freedoms lost are rarely regained without great effort and resistance. Understanding this pattern is essential safeguarding decision-making power in future crises.

for

Protecting medical autonomy today is not just about defending individual health choices—it is about resisting a dangerous precedent that threatens all areas of personal liberty.

By reclaiming the right to choose treatments, providers, and care pathways, individuals create a system that serves patients rather than institutions.

Medical freedom ensures that future health policies reflect truth, transparency, and respect for individual rights, rather than centralized control or profit-driven agendas.

⚠ Attention: Medical freedom is a foundation of personal liberty. The pandemic exposed how quickly this freedom can be eroded, making it urgent to defend your right to make informed choices about your healthcare before it is permanently lost.

2. Institutional Corruption and the Importance of Critical Thinking

The pandemic did more than expose flaws in our healthcare system—it revealed the deep institutional corruption that spans across media, academia, government agencies, and even the judiciary.

This phenomenon, known as institutional capture, occurs when powerful corporate or political interests co-opt independent organizations and steer them away from serving the public good.

As Dr. Gold emphasizes, Big Pharma's influence over government health agencies and medical schools has created a system where policies and practices are driven by profit, not patient care.

Over time, doctors who were once trusted advocates for their patients have increasingly become employees of large healthcare corporations or government-funded systems.

This shift has eroded the doctor-patient relationship, with many physicians pressured to follow institutional directives instead of providing care based solely on their patients' best interests.

The result is a healthcare environment where dissenting voices are silenced, innovative treatments are suppressed, and critical information is withheld from the public.

"All of our institutions have been captured—media, academia, medical schools, and even the judiciary. Big Pharma runs the federal government, not the other way around." —Dr. Simone Gold

Institutional capture is not limited to healthcare. Similar dynamics are at play in the financial sector, including the push for central bank digital currencies (CBDCs) and other policies that could centralize control and limit individual freedoms.

Blindly trusting so-called “experts” in these compromised systems leaves individuals vulnerable to misinformation, manipulation, and decisions that serve institutional agendas rather than the public interest.

The solution begins with critical thinking. Citizens must learn to question authority, verify information from multiple sources, and seek out independent, unbiased voices.

Events such as Freedom Summit 2025 give communities the tools to identify corruption and build networks dedicated to truth, transparency, and accountability.

By developing the discipline to think for yourself, you can protect your health, finances, and personal liberty from being undermined by hidden forces of control.

Attention: Institutional capture has corrupted trusted systems. Thinking critically and questioning authority are essential to discerning truth and protecting both your freedom and your future.

3. Taking Back Control: Affordable Healthcare and Lifestyle Choices

Healthcare in America has reached a breaking point. The average family of four spends over $2,000 per month on health insurance premiums, yet many of these plans fail to provide real value.

“Healthcare costs have skyrocketed. They’ve gotten almost impossible to manage.” –Kevin Freeman

High deductibles, limited provider choices, and endless red tape leave families paying tens of thousands of dollars each year for a system that prioritizes bureaucracy over patients.

Even worse, this third-party payer model has eroded the once-sacred doctor-patient relationship, as many physicians now work for corporations or government programs instead of serving their patients directly.

“Healthcare is not unaffordable—health insurance is. We’ve been led to believe we need a $2,000-a-month safety net, but that system is broken. There’s a better way.” –Dr. Simone Gold

Dr. Simone Gold's solution, GoldCare.com, provides a practical, affordable alternative:

- » $10/month membership that includes access to:
 - Unbiased medical education
 - Wellness resources and tools
 - Community support and health information
- » Fee-for-service doctor visits at transparent, competitive rates, completely bypassing the insurance middleman
- » Restores the doctor-patient relationship, ensuring physicians focus on patient care rather than corporate or government mandates

Beyond structural reform, Dr. Gold emphasizes the importance of personal responsibility and prevention.

Many chronic conditions can be prevented—or even reversed—through simple lifestyle choices such as proper nutrition, daily exercise, and quality sleep.

These habits form the foundation of long-term health and can reduce or eliminate the need for costly medications like statins or antidepressants, along with their potential side effects.

By investing in prevention, families can dramatically cut both healthcare expenses and reliance on a pharmaceutical system driven by profit rather than well-being.

This two-pronged approach—rebuilding healthcare through direct access and empowering individuals through healthy habits—offers a path to financial and physical independence.

It's a way to reject a broken, profit-driven model and create a future where care is affordable, transparent, and focused on patients.

Attention: Affordable healthcare solutions and preventive lifestyle changes can save you thousands while giving you control over your health and freedom from a failing system.
