

Trial by Fire #5: Demographic Destiny

America stands at a critical crossroads. Escalating global tensions, internal division, economic fragility, and cultural fragmentation are converging into a single, compounding threat to national sovereignty and long-term prosperity. This crisis does not arrive with tanks or missiles, but through declining birth rates, eroding purchasing power, and the steady weakening of the cultural and moral foundations that sustain a free society.

These challenges are not isolated events.

Demographic decline, economic warfare, and ideological erosion reinforce one another in a vicious cycle that weakens families, divides generations, and leaves the nation increasingly vulnerable to coercion, control, and authoritarian influence. When families struggle to form, when work no longer builds stability, and when shared values erode, self-government itself becomes fragile. At the center of this crisis is a simple but uncomfortable truth: a nation that cannot sustain its people, its families, or its values cannot sustain its freedom.

Demographics determine long-term economic vitality. Economic policy shapes family formation. Culture determines whether a society chooses selflessness and continuity—or selfishness and collapse.

In this briefing we will discuss the following:

- » Demographic Collapse as a Civilizational and National Security Threat
- » Economic Warfare, Fiat Money, and the Vicious Cycle Undermining Families
- » Cultural Erosion, the Four Horsemen, and the Path to Restoration

YOUR MISSION: Identify the forces driving America's demographic, economic, and cultural decline—and take informed action to restore family formation, affordability, and national strength.

WHY YOU SHOULD CARE

- » These forces determine whether America remains economically productive, culturally cohesive, and sovereign—or slides into irreversible decline.
- » Inflation, debt, and demographic collapse are not abstract policy issues; they directly affect your ability to afford housing, raise a family, retire securely, and pass opportunity to the next generation.
- » As family formation weakens, national security erodes—shrinking the workforce, aging the population, and straining economic and defense resources.
- » The same pressures that destabilize families also increase dependence, surveillance, and centralized control over everyday life.
- » Understanding these threats—and the role of sound money and cultural renewal—equips you to preserve purchasing power, strengthen families, and contribute to a resilient, thriving nation.

1. Demographic Collapse as a Civilizational and National Security Threat

A stable society requires a stable population. When a nation's birthrate falls below the replacement level of 2.1 children per woman, it enters a predictable cycle of aging, contraction, and decline. Societal suicide.

Fewer young people are available to support the elderly, fund social programs, defend the nation, or sustain long-term economic growth. Over time, this imbalance produces fiscal stress, political conflict, and social fragmentation.

Demographics are often summarized with a blunt but accurate phrase: demographics is destiny.

Long-term population trends shape a nation's culture, religion, workforce, and geopolitical strength. A shrinking population does not simply slow economic output—it alters the balance of power within society and between nations.

“If the average birthrate per woman is less than 2.1, your society begins to age and die. That’s just a statistical fact.” – Kevin Freeman

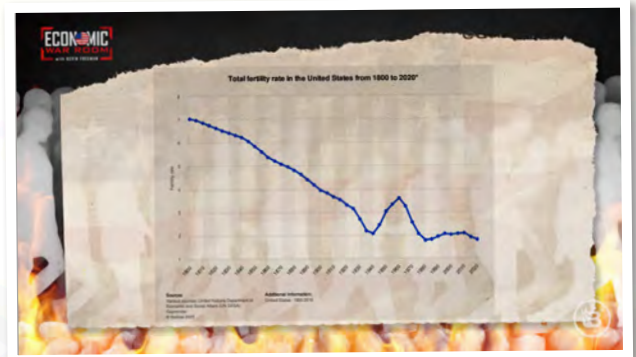

Today, the United States and much of the Western world operate near a 1.6 birth rate, well below replacement.

As populations age, wealth increasingly concentrates among older asset-holders while younger generations struggle with affordability. This generational divide deepens resentment, fuels class conflict, and destabilizes democratic systems.

From a national security perspective, demographic weakness invites exploitation.

Nations with shrinking and aging populations are less capable of resisting foreign pressure, economic warfare, or ideological subversion. A smaller workforce means less production, fewer innovators, and a diminished pool of future soldiers and defenders.

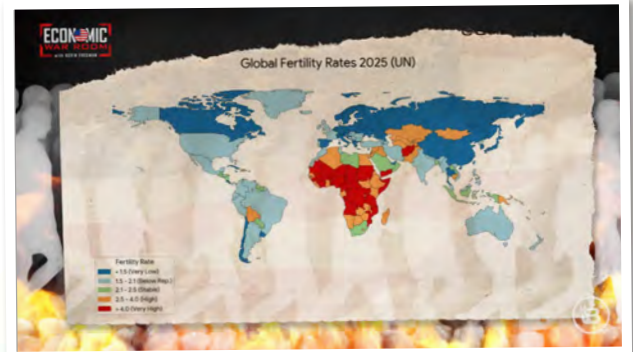

“Societies with birthrates below the replacement rate face a slow and often painful demise.” –Kevin Freeman

A nation that cannot replace its population will eventually lose its ability to defend itself.

Globally, demographic growth is shifting toward regions with higher fertility, particularly parts of sub-Saharan Africa and the Middle East.

In Europe, Muslim populations now average 2.6 children per woman, compared to 1.6 among non-Muslims, accelerating changes in national identity and social cohesion.

Aging Western societies with declining native populations become increasingly vulnerable to cultural displacement, economic coercion, and external domination.

Rather than addressing the root causes of demographic decline, elites increasingly promote technological substitutes—such as transhumanism, longevity technologies, and programmable digital systems—as alternatives to family formation.

These approaches do not restore demographic health. They consolidate power, expand surveillance, and reduce human beings to managed economic units.

Efforts to offset demographic collapse through immigration without assimilation introduce additional risks. Importing population without shared cultural norms, civic loyalty, or economic integration does not restore cohesion—it often accelerates division and instability.

Ultimately, demographic collapse is not an isolated problem. It is the downstream result of deeper economic and cultural forces—particularly affordability, debt, and the erosion of purchasing power—which directly shape whether families can form at all.

Attention: A nation that cannot replace its population cannot sustain its economy, its culture, or its freedom.

2. Economic Warfare, Fiat Money, and the Vicious Cycle Undermining Families

Modern demographic decline did not emerge in a vacuum. It followed a structural shift in the monetary system.

When the United States severed its final link to gold in 1971, it entered a fiat money system—currency backed not by tangible value, but by government decree. Fiat systems allow unlimited debt expansion, and history shows that they inevitably lead to inflation.

Economic warfare exploits this weakness. Rather than tanks or troops, adversaries attack purchasing power, debt stability, and confidence in a nation's currency.

Since abandoning gold convertibility in 1971, the U.S. dollar has lost over 90% of its purchasing power, enabling exponential debt growth—now approaching $40 trillion—and permanently altering the economics of family life.

“People believe having kids is too expensive. And who can blame them? Prices have gone up—or another way to look at it is the purchasing power of our dollar has gone down.” —Kevin Freeman

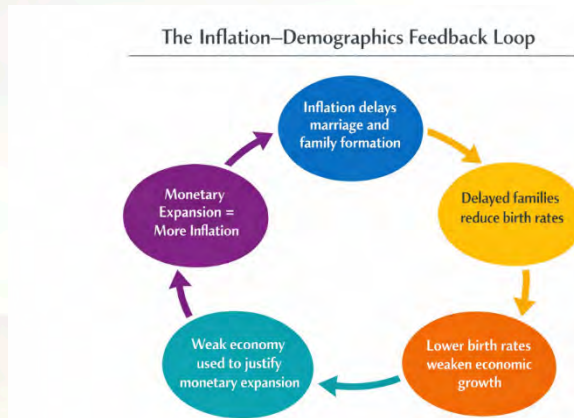

Inflation undermines family formation long before it is reflected in population data. Inflation is not merely rising prices; it is the silent erosion of purchasing power.

As currency loses value, necessities such as housing, healthcare, education, and childcare become increasingly unaffordable—especially for young families. The results are measurable and devastating.

The median age of marriage for women has risen from 22 to 29. First-time homebuyers now average around age 40 according to recent reports. The cost of raising a child has surged from $233,000 in 2017 to $320,000 by 2025, causing nearly three-quarters of families to believe children are simply too expensive.

“When young people cannot afford stability, they postpone or abandon having children.” –Kevin Freeman

This affordability crisis creates a self-reinforcing cycle:

At the same time, inflation widens the wealth gap. Asset owners benefit from rising nominal values, while wage earners fall behind. This generational divide fuels resentment, undermines faith in free markets, and opens the door to collectivist ideologies and political radicalization.

Adversaries compound the damage through intellectual property theft, deindustrialization, and financialization—shifting wealth away from productive labor and hollowing out the middle class.

From a strategic standpoint, economic fragility makes societies more susceptible to centralized control mechanisms. Proposals for central bank digital currencies (CBDCs) represent a dangerous escalation—programmable money that can restrict spending, enforce compliance, or penalize dissent under the guise of stability.

“Debt weakens the dollar. Then, a dollar attack opens the door to introduce central bank digital currency—programmable money designed to keep the wealthy in power and the rest of us under their boot... When money becomes programmable, freedom becomes conditional.” –Kevin Freeman

Fiat money does not merely distort markets. It reshapes families, generations, and power itself.

When work no longer builds stability and savings no longer preserve value, cultural norms begin to fracture. Despair replaces hope. Short-term survival displaces long-term commitment. And the moral foundations that once sustained family life begin to erode.

Attention: Fiat money and economic warfare form a self-reinforcing cycle that destroys affordability, delays families, and concentrates power—setting the stage for cultural collapse.

3. Cultural Erosion, the Four Horsemen, and the Path to Restoration

Economic stress alone does not explain demographic collapse. Hardship has existed in every generation. What determines whether societies endure or decay is how they respond—and that response is shaped by culture and moral framework.

Over recent decades, the steady erosion of a biblical worldview has coincided with rising divorce, increased abortion, delayed marriage, and collapsing fertility. When shared moral anchors weaken, societies lose the ability to sacrifice today for the sake of the future.

At the same time, America faces coordinated pressure from what I have described as the Four Horsemen—forces that exploit cultural weakness and economic strain to accelerate national decline:

- » Communism, which hollowed out the middle class, undermined private property, and normalized dependency
- » Islamism, which advances incompatible legal and cultural systems while outpacing Western fertility as a means of conquering
- » Globalism, which prioritizes technocratic control, depopulation narratives, and post-national governance
- » Domestic greed and cowardice, which enable the others through apathy, fear, and self-interest

“If a house is divided against itself, that house cannot stand.” —Jesus, Mark 3:25

Cultural narratives that elevate individual fulfillment over sacrifice, career over family, and convenience over continuity steadily reduce the willingness to invest in future generations.

When life is framed as self-actualization rather than stewardship, children become a cost instead of a calling. Marriage becomes optional. Permanence becomes inconvenient.

This shift is reinforced by ideologies that deny human limits and obligations.

Transhumanism—the belief that technology should replace or fundamentally alter humanity—further detaches society from family-based continuity.

Rather than supporting mothers and fathers, elites increasingly promote technological substitutes, longevity schemes, and centralized systems of control.

“A decline in Christianity is linked to a decline in the pursuit of ‘be fruitful and multiply.’” –Kevin Freeman

The data reflects this moral shift. Since the 1970s, Christian identification among Americans under 30 has fallen from roughly 80% to about 45%.

Divorce surged alongside inflation, with money consistently cited as the top predictor. Abortion rates increased dramatically following Roe v. Wade, with financial pressure cited in roughly 40% of cases.

LGBTQ+ identification rose in parallel with declines in opposite-sex marriage, contributing to millions of fewer births over time.

Environmental and health factors—pollution, chemical exposure, poor diets, obesity, and declining fertility—have compounded the crisis. But these too reflect cultural priorities. When profit replaces stewardship and convenience replaces responsibility, physical health declines alongside moral health.

Restoration requires more than policy reform. It requires a moral reset—a return to principles that sustain families and freedom over generations.

That includes restoring sound money so work and savings retain value, rebuilding affordability so young families can form earlier, and reaffirming family, faith, and responsibility as social goods rather than private inconveniences.

Historical wisdom offers a clear path forward. John Wesley’s guidance remains timeless: earn all you can ethically, save and invest wisely, and give generously. Where these principles take root, generosity replaces selfishness, stewardship replaces exploitation, and families regain hope.

Conservatives' higher marriage and birth rates demonstrate that aligned values still produce demographic resilience.

“Strong families do not emerge from selfish cultures—and free nations do not survive without strong families.” –Kevin Freeman

This is where the battle ultimately turns. Economic systems shape behavior, but culture shapes purpose.

When families are restored, communities stabilize. When communities stabilize, liberty endures.

Attention: A society that abandons family and faith will eventually trade freedom for control—but a society that restores them can reclaim its future.

ACTION STEPS:

1. Visit TransactionalGold.com to learn more about the gold and silver alternative and what is happening in your state.
2. Take steps to protect savings and income from inflation by reducing reliance on debt and exploring durable stores of value aligned with economic justice.
3. Support policies and leaders that restrain debt and inflation, oppose programmable digital currencies, and prioritize affordability, secure borders, and family formation.
4. Reinvest in community, faith, and mentorship by supporting churches and local initiatives that teach ethical stewardship, generosity, and intergenerational responsibility.
5. Strengthen personal and family resilience by improving health, avoiding harmful foods and environmental toxins, and cultivating habits that support long-term stability.
6. Share this framework with others to build awareness, unity, and resilience—because cultural renewal and national strength begin at the household and community level.

ONGOING ACTION STEPS:

1. Get the book Pirate Money to learn about the transactional gold and silver movement sweeping America. Legislation has now passed in Florida, Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, and Missouri! This is the answer to inflation and the looming threat of CBDC.
2. Get a copy of According to Plan to better understand these domestic attacks on our Liberty as well as the overall Marxist plan to consume America.
3. Seek opportunities to inspire other Americans to stand up for what is right.
4. Send them this Economic Battle Plan™ and ask them what they are doing to stand for America and Liberty!
 - » Elect Politicians that understand the need to preserve American Liberty.
 - » Encourage and ask your elected officials to educate themselves.
 - » Ask them how they are working to strengthen our education system and reverse the push for Marxist indoctrination. These are big issues, if your representatives are not aware and working toward solutions directly or indirectly based on their committees, hold them accountable!

Your support for Transactional Gold and Silver Currency is critical! We have legislation advancing in 20+ states! Learn about progress in your state at <https://transactionalgold.com/> and click the "Active States" button in the upper right-hand corner.

5. Check your investments to see if they are helping fund the agendas of Globalist Elites. If you have a financial advisor insist that they give you an update and encourage them to become part of the NSIC.
