THE GREAT RE-ORDER

For more than 80 years, America has lived inside an order built by Franklin Roosevelt: a permanent, unelected government at home and a globalist system abroad that kept handing other nations advantages long after they stopped needing them. Most commentators look at the tariffs, the executive orders, and the clashes with Brussels and see chaos. Rod Martin sees a plan, and he has written the map for it.

Rod D. Martin, founder and CEO of Martin Capital, part of PayPal's pre-IPO startup team, and author of the new book Trump's New World Re-Order, joins Kevin Freeman to explain the strategy behind the style: making the executive branch answer to elections again, demanding fair access to foreign markets, building a dollar no rival can displace, and racing China for the most valuable real estate of this century, which happens to be in space.

WATCH NOW

In this briefing we will discuss the following:

- The Fourth Branch Falls: How Trump Is Dismantling an 80-Year Order at Home and Abroad
- Fair Trade and a Stronger Dollar: Tariffs, Stablecoins, and a Century of American Economic Leadership
- The 1492 Premium: Why the Space Economy Is the Most Underpriced Future in America

YOUR MISSION: Learn the strategy behind the headlines, from the dismantling of the administrative state to tariffs, the dollar, and the space race, so you can explain to anyone why what looks like chaos is actually a plan.

WHY YOU SHOULD CARE

- The administrative state is finally answerable to voters. The Supreme Court ended Chevron deference in 2024, and a 2025 executive order brought the so-called independent regulatory agencies back under the elected president's supervision.
- Europe is the warning, not the model. The European Union's combined economy was larger than America's before the 2008 financial crisis; today it is roughly two-thirds the size.
- "Free trade" was never free for American producers. Before the new trade deals, the EU charged four times the U.S. tariff on cars, India once charged 100 percent on Harley-Davidson motorcycles, and Canada's over-quota dairy tariffs still run well above 200 percent.
- The dollar is getting stronger, not weaker. Under the GENIUS Act, every regulated dollar stablecoin must be backed one-for-one by cash and short-term Treasuries, creating a vast new buyer of U.S. debt and putting dollars in the pockets of billions of new users.
- The next frontier is already being claimed. China is racing the United States to the water ice at the Moon's south pole, and whoever controls that ground controls the refueling stations of the space economy.

Ep. 11-421 (OSINT) Open-Sourced Intelligence Report. This briefing includes a conversation between Kevin D. Freeman, D.Sc. (h.c.), CFA and Rod D. Martin. Rod is a friend of the Economic War Room® and an American Patriot.

Rod D. Martin is the founder and CEO of Martin Capital and the author of The Rod Martin Report at RodMartin.org. He was part of PayPal's pre-IPO startup team, serving as special counsel to Peter Thiel, and served as policy director to Arkansas Governor Mike Huckabee. He serves on the board of the Center for Security Policy and on the Committee on the Present Danger: China.

His new book, Trump's New World Re-Order: Dismantling the Deep State and Ending Postwar Globalist Rule, with a foreword by Eric Metaxas, argues that the order Franklin Roosevelt built is ending and that what looks like chaos is actually a plan. Rod is a longtime friend of the Economic War Room, where he made the case years ago for a gold-backed digital Texan, real money for everyday transactions, before gold and silver became legal tender in Texas.

1. The Fourth Branch Falls: How Trump Is Dismantling an 80-Year Order at Home and Abroad

Almost everyone misunderstands Donald Trump, including many who love him. They mistake his style for his strategy. The strategy is to dismantle two structures built in the Roosevelt era: an unelected, unaccountable fourth branch of government at home, and a lopsided postwar system abroad that subsidized allies long after they had recovered from World War II. Rod D. Martin calls Trump the counter-FDR: one project at two scales. At home, elections have to matter. Abroad, nations have to matter.

> "They see the knight, the rook, and the pawn. They do not see the whole board." –Rod D. Martin, Trump's New World Re-Order

The fourth branch is a collection of agencies that write rules with the force of law, enforce them, and often judge disputes over them, all without facing a single voter. For forty years, Chevron deference told federal courts to defer to an agency's own reading of the statutes it administers. The Supreme Court overturned Chevron in Loper Bright Enterprises v. Raimondo in June 2024, and in February 2025 the president signed Executive Order 14215, Ensuring Accountability for All Agencies, which requires the so-called independent regulatory agencies to submit significant rules for White House review. Agencies that answer to the elected president answer, ultimately, to the people who elected him.

> "The strategy is to create an American-led order, and not just America in the sense of the country, America in the sense of the people. The president is trying to make elections matter again by making the executive branch accountable to elections. That is a phenomenal and important front for the restoration of our constitutional order."
> –Rod D. Martin

Abroad, the postwar bargain made sense in 1947, when America's allies were flattened. They received lopsided trade deals: they did not have to open their markets to American goods, but they got nearly full access to ours. That need ended decades ago. The deals did not.

© 2026 EWR-Media Holdings, LLC

The European Union shows where that model leads. Before the 2008 financial crisis, the EU's combined economy was larger than America's. Today it is roughly two-thirds the size. Canada has about the population of California and roughly half of California's economy. These governments took what Roosevelt built and put it on steroids: they are ruled by credentialed elites who go through the motions of elections without truly submitting to them.

> "Donald Trump actually thinks that nations matter, that a nation is not some scary thing, but a discrete group of people that gets to rule itself and not be ruled from some foreign capital somewhere. That's how you get an independent India. That's how you get an independent Kenya. That's how you get an independent Poland. And 250 years ago, it's how you got an independent United States." –Rod D. Martin

On defense, the expectation has changed too: allies are expected to be partners, not dependents. The approach traces to Alfred Thayer Mahan, the American naval strategist who argued in the 1890s that whoever controls the world's maritime choke points controls global commerce. Controlling those choke points is how America contains China without firing a shot.

> "He had four years of having everything done to him that any president has ever had done to any president, and four years in exile to think about it. So he came back with the entire four years of a second term scripted in minute detail. And it's like nothing we've ever seen." –Rod D. Martin

⚠ Attention: What looks like chaos is a plan. Trump returned as Gandalf the White, better informed and more powerful, with a strategy to make Washington answer to voters and the world deal fairly with America.

2. Fair Trade and a Stronger Dollar: Tariffs, Stablecoins, and a Century of American Economic Leadership

The loudest charge against the president is that his tariffs are destroying free trade. The record says otherwise. At the 2018 G7 summit in Charlevoix, Quebec, Trump proposed eliminating every tariff, every non-tariff barrier, and every subsidy among the world's largest economies. The optimal trade barrier is zero. The other side would not play ball.

© 2026 EWR-Media Holdings, LLC

Free trade has never really existed anywhere except inside the borders of the United States. Florida trades freely with Georgia. America has never traded freely with Germany. Before the new trade deal, the EU charged a 10 percent tariff on American cars while the U.S. charged 2.5 percent on European ones. India once charged 100 percent on Harley-Davidson motorcycles, which is not a tariff but an embargo. Canada's over-quota tariffs on American milk run about 241 percent, and higher still on other dairy products.

> "Trump's approach is not about going back to the law of the jungle. The point is to get some fairness into the system, where you have equal access to each other's markets. And the tariffs help create that by matching what they're doing. As a result, they want to negotiate them down." –Rod D. Martin

> "What I hear you saying is that Trump is just demanding fairness for the American people, which is a powerful thing. And he's using the tools that he has at his disposal to make that happen."
> –Kevin D. Freeman, D.Sc. (h.c.), CFA

The same strategy shapes the dollar, which Rod D. Martin calls a strategic weapon. Gold strengthens America's monetary position: Texas, Florida, Arkansas, Louisiana, Missouri, and Utah have enacted laws recognizing gold and silver as legal tender, a movement Rod D. Martin credits the Economic War Room team with pulling off, giving citizens a sound-money option that can move electronically, with Texas's state transaction system due by May 1, 2027. At the same time, the dollar remains dominant, and the administration is reinforcing it. The United States set up a $20 billion currency swap line with Argentina in October 2025. U.S. crude oil production is at record highs, shifting energy power from the Persian Gulf to the Gulf of America. And in April 2026, the United Arab Emirates announced it would leave OPEC after 59 years. The UAE and Saudi Arabia held much of the cartel's spare capacity, the reserve OPEC needs to move prices by cutting supply. Treasury is also talking about building new dollar funding centers in key regions of the world, giving partners dollar liquidity and little reason to look elsewhere.

© 2026 EWR-Media Holdings, LLC

Then there are stablecoins. The GENIUS Act, signed in July 2025, requires every regulated dollar stablecoin to be backed one-for-one by cash and short-term Treasuries. Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent has said stablecoins could drive trillions of dollars of new demand for U.S. government debt.

> "Why on earth would a normal person in Luzon or Khuzestan not use dollars if he can use them in the form of a stablecoin that is 100% backed by U.S. Treasuries and has no transfer fees worthy of mentioning? So now you've got billions of new dollar users. On top of that, the issuers of those stablecoins have to back them 100% with Treasuries, which means we just created a vast new buyer of U.S. debt."
> –Rod D. Martin

None of this works without growth. The national debt passed $40 trillion in August 2026, and interest on that debt now costs more than national defense. Spending cuts alone cannot close that gap. Growth is the key to eliminating the deficit first and then the debt, and every policy above, from energy to trade to the dollar, is built to produce it.

The alternatives are weak. China's birth rate fell to a record low in 2025 and its population shrank for a fourth straight year: too few young workers supporting too many retirees, and an economy built on overcapacity it cannot consume at home. China needs access to the American consumer far more than America needs China's exports, and that leverage is what lets the United States contain Beijing while it strains toward the kind of crack-up that ended the Soviet Union. China is the greatest geopolitical threat of our time, and it is far weaker and more brittle than the world imagines, which is exactly what makes the next decade dangerous.

> "Nobody can really use the euro as a global reserve currency. If they could, they would have. Nobody's going to be able to use the currency of a country that's in demographic freefall in place of the dollar either. So we've actually got an amazing opportunity, if we don't blow it, to entrench dollar dominance for another century." –Rod D. Martin

Its currency is a pressure point. Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent was part of the team that broke the Bank of England in 1992, when the British government spent billions defending an exchange rate the market knew was false. Rod D. Martin asks whether the yuan, propped up at a level Beijing chooses, is next.

© 2026 EWR-Media Holdings, LLC

"Speculators don't destroy sound currencies by magic. They attack when governments defend lies."
–Rod D. Martin, Trump's New World Re-Order

⚠ Attention: Tariffs are the path to fair trade, not the end of it. Every trading partner needs the American market more than America needs theirs, and that leverage is building a dollar no rival can displace.

3. The 1492 Premium: Why the Space Economy Is the Most Underpriced Future in America

The future is underpriced. Rod D. Martin calls it the 1492 premium: like Europe on the eve of Columbus, America stands at the edge of a new world whose value markets have barely begun to count. The space economy is the clearest example.

NASA spending was never money shot into space; it was spent on Earth, in the paychecks of American workers. What changes now is the cost of getting there. SpaceX already accounts for the large majority of all mass launched to orbit worldwide, and Starship is designed to cut the cost of reaching orbit by more than an order of magnitude. Wall Street is modeling the result: Morgan Stanley's research on SpaceX treats AI data centers, on the ground and eventually in orbit, as the company's next major line of business.

> "What Starship does, by reducing the cost per pound to orbit from about $10,000 a pound to about $200 a pound, means you're going to buy a lot more access to space. It'll start with AI data centers. It will move toward replacing intercontinental transportation. We're talking about New York to London in 26 minutes." –Rod D. Martin

The military implications are just as large. The Air Force's Rocket Cargo program, which awarded SpaceX a $102 million contract in 2022, is studying how to move up to 100 tons anywhere on Earth in about 90 minutes.

> "With a thousand Starships, we could move everything that we sent to Saudi Arabia in 1990 and '91 in an hour. Not six months, an hour. It is transformative for American power." –Rod D. Martin

© 2026 EWR-Media Holdings, LLC

Cheaper access opens mining in space, where resources can be extracted without polluting a single stream or clearing a single rainforest. Over the next 25 to 50 years, that could raise the supply of every major resource by an order of magnitude, a path toward ending global poverty and toward a far richer United States.

China understands this, and wants to be the one who makes it happen. Its Chang'e-7 mission is built to hunt for water ice at the Moon's south pole, and Beijing has set 2030 as its target for a crewed landing. Water can become drinking water, breathable oxygen, and rocket fuel - everything a space economy needs that no one wants to lift out of Earth's gravity. NASA Administrator Jared Isaacman, confirmed in December 2025, has said plainly that America is in a space race with China right now.

> "That is going to be the Azores or the Madeira or the Canary Islands of the rest of this century. It's absolute strategic real estate. We must capture it. Jared Isaacman, the president, Elon, all get it. We're on it. It's happening. I think we win that." –Rod D. Martin

There are reasons for hope here on Earth as well. A political realignment is underway, and there are signs that Christianity's long decline in America has leveled off. A nation recovering its faith and its self-government is a nation ready to claim a new frontier.

All of that new activity will need people, and those people will shape what comes next. The decisions made in this decade will set the terms of the next five centuries, the same way the voyages of 1492 did.

⚠ Attention: We are deciding the next 500 years right now. The nation that controls the high ground of space will set the rules of the next economy, and America must be that nation.

6. If you live in Texas, Florida, Arkansas, Louisiana, Missouri, or Utah, learn how your state's gold and silver legal tender law works, starting at TransactionalGold.com; if you live anywhere else, ask your state legislators when your state will follow.
7. Ask your financial advisor how your portfolio is positioned for a strong-dollar decade and for the space economy, and run each holding through the Liberty, Security, and Values filter.

In the Economic War Room®, we encourage Americans to be the "little ships that make the difference." You cannot solely rely on the government or the president to solve America's problems. You have to make a difference. It is up to you to help take our country back and create a voice for economic liberty.
